Conference Center at the Maritime Institute Offers the Chesapeake Squadron Sea Scouts New Meeting Place

Linthicum, Maryland- Glen Paine, Executive Director of the Conference Center at the Maritime Institute, announced its community service provision to allow the Chesapeake Squadron Chapter of the Sea Scouts, a division of the Boy Scouts of America, a new meeting place.

“For years the Chesapeake Squadron of the Sea Scouts has held its meetings at the U.S. Coast Guard Yard in Curtis Bay. After September 11th, use of the Yard became difficult,” said Eddie H. Wright, Commodore. “The advantage of the Yard was that it was easy to access from I-695. We were not sure if the Squadron would find another place as convenient to hold our meetings. The generosity of Mr. Paine and his staff has been overwhelming and the meeting facilities have exceeded our expectations.”

“The Chesapeake Squadron of the Sea Scouts is a fine organization committed to working with our community’s youth. The Conference Center is a secure environment with over 100,000 square-feet of meeting space, which is easy to access from I-695,” said Glen Paine. “Since our facility is the primary training center for the International Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots; encouraging these boys to learn about the marine environment is a worthy community cause and we certainly welcome them to our campus.”
